Over the years honeymoon destinations have changed drastically. While our parents tended to stay on the Emerald Isle, younger generations flew abroad to hotter locations with golden beaches and clear blue water. However the honeymoon trends continue to alter and as discovered by leading Irish travel design company Adams & Butler, sizzling under the summer sun is no longer a popular desire for honeymooners who crave adventure and enriching life experiences.

According to Adams & Butler cold is the new hot for newly-weds. The Northern Lights is high on the honeymoon list as is Alaska and the Arctic. Couples seek discovery rather than a lazy week of lounging and when it comes to choosing a location for a honeymoon, they want something different, they want to indulge in new cultures and step outside their comfort zones making memories that will last a life time and a honeymoon that won't be forgotten in a hurry.

If you are planning your honeymoon check out Adams & Butler's honeymoon destinations and top tips below:
